FARMER HAINES SHOT CHICKEN THIEF

Alvin Haines of Plymouth Township Sent Lord of Bird Shot at Fleeing Man—Had Been Robbed of Several Hundred Poultry—Thief Concealed Injuries After Arrest on Another Charge, Hamilton Kille, of North Wales, the Culprit, is Now in Hospital—Two Stories.

(Story No. one.)
Alvin Haines, of Plymouth township, caught a man in the act of stealing his poultry at 2:55 o'clock last Saturday morning. He fired a load of bird shot after the thief and believed that he wounded the man, who made his escape.

During the past few months Mr. Haines has had about three hundred chickens stolen. When he was aroused early Saturday morning by hearing a commotion in his poultry house, he immediately grabbed his shot gun and started towards the barn. He proceeded but a short distance when he saw a man carrying a basket. Mr. Haines called to the man to throw up his hands. Instead, however, he dropped the basket and started to run. Mr. Haines fired and the thief fell, then scrambled to his feet and ran off in the darkness. In his haste to get away the man dropped the basket which contained six chickens.

Mr. Haines notified the police of the surrounding districts. The Norristown officers inquired at the hospitals for a wounded man, but not to his.

MAN LOCKED IN JAIL.

Found to be Wounded When Ordered to Take a Bath—Was Arrested on Old Charge of Theft—Confessed to Stealing the Haines Chickens.

At an early hour Saturday morning a Norristown policeman came upon Hamilton Kille, on Green street near Oak. The man was in the act of fleeing to secure admittance to the house of a relative. Carrigan took his prisoner to the police station. After he had been questioned by Sergeant Macolly he was taken to the cell room to await a hearing before Magistrate Harry shortly after 11 o'clock.

The police had been looking for Kille for the past six months on the charge of stealing chickens. He is well-known in police circles, having served a term in the County Prison several years ago.

When arraigned for a hearing Kille did not show any signs that would indicate that he had been wounded. He walked from the police station to the County Prison. During the afternoon Warden Roberts arranged to give him a bath and it was then discovered that his clothing was saturated with blood. On being questioned Kille then admitted that he had been shot while robbing the henner of Mr. Haines.

Prison Physician Knappe was summoned and he found that Kille's right side had been ripped with bird shot from his shoulder to the hip. The condition was such that the physician ordered that he be removed to Charity Hospital, where he would receive the proper attention. The prisoner said that after he had been shot he fell to the ground but regained his feet and succeeded in getting away. He decided to make his way to the house of a relative and get medical attention but had been discovered and placed under arrest. He then decided not to say anything about his injuries, notwithstanding that he was suffering and weak from loss of blood.

At the time Mr. Haines fired, Kille was not over thirty feet away. The police say that Kille wore three shirts and a coat, which prevented the shot from doing more damage.

It was at one time a resident of Norristown, his father being the proprietor of the hotel at Main and Barbados streets about thirty years ago. For a while he made his home at North Wales but for several months he has been living in Philadelphia.

NEW SCHOOL WANTED.

A very interesting meeting of the Home and School Association was held Tuesday evening last in Fox Chase school house. Strong and vigorous speeches were made concerning the condition of the building used for the primary school. It is unsanitary, heated by old worn out stoves and appears to be steep steps. There are 55 pupils. The building has been condemned but is still in use. The association decided to have an engineer inspect the building and upon his report a strong protest and petition will be presented to the Board of Education. A modern school building is being tried.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Goebel spent the weekend at Atlantic City.

EIGHT YEARS IN JAIL FOR KILLING MAN

Judge Swartz Scored Jamison While Announcing Sentence for Killing Coons—Other Sentences at Norristown on Saturday.

Judge Swartz on Saturday sentenced James Jamison, convicted of murder in the second degree for the death of Benjamin Coons, in Horschman, last August, to the county jail for a term of eight years. In imposing sentence, Judge Swartz told the defendant that he was fortunate in having able counsel to take care of his case. He was unfortunate in not having any money to employ counsel, but the law makes provision for cases of this kind and that all had been done for him that could be done.

The Court said he thought the verdict was a proper one. The verdict might have been involuntary manslaughter, if the jury had taken a different view. He said the defendant's actions were cruel and persistent. It would have been much better for him if he had told the truth. The jury didn't believe his story as told on the stand, of how the murdered man had jumped over from being very drunk, a knife in his hand to attack him. Witnesses had heard them in the lane for an hour before the murder. He beat him helplessly and defenseless. He beat him cruelly again, crushing his ribs. The Court said, however, he would take in consideration that they were very drunk. Drunkenness is no excuse. But because of this fact together with the character evidence produced, he could not be punished as severely as he otherwise should. Still a life was taken. A man was killed.

"You must be punished, not only as a punishment for yourself, but also as a warning to others who would do a like act in the condition you were in," said the Judge.

Other sentences imposed included: John Norwood, of Ogontz, for felonious entry, larceny and resisting an officer, three years; Henry Peters, for keeping a disorderly house at Ardmore, one year; Cora Corbin, of Lansdale, burning with a sad iron Mary Lane, a little negro girl, did not go to prison for a month; Frank Harst, of Lancaster, larceny, two months; John McDuff, of Ardmore, larceny, one month; $75 and costs; Isaac Lomax, of Abington, indecent assault on stepdaughter, three months; Gear, of Norristown, of Philadelphia, threatening the life of his wife at her residence in Port Knoch, one month; Wm. W. Wentz, of Philadelphia, one year; Samuel Weekly, of Philadelphia, theft of a watch from Albert Kirsch, employed on estate of Countess Durbell, of the Old York road section, not less than nine months nor more than three years; John McCarter, theft of stamped envelopes from office of a Norristown lawyer, 60 days.

The Red Leather Chair

Cypher Revealed Hiding Place of Thief's Loot
By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright by American Press Association, Inc.

Edgar Hewitt was a fortunate young man in one respect, for he knew precisely what he wanted. He led the strenuous life of a journalist in a small, wide awake city, and his moments of rest were the fewer because, with one exception, everybody else connected with the paper was sound asleep. The property belonged to Hewitt's uncle, who had been a good newspaper man in his day, but had now run down like a clock.

It should be said in favor of Leonard Hewitt, the uncle, that he knew his own condition. He had lost interest in active business. A long buried love of travel had risen in his heart, and he led the paper that held him. He had a pride in it. He would not let it die, nor would he sell it except to the right man. It was the ambition of Edgar Hewitt, the nephew, to buy it, and the terms had already been named. Ten thousand dollars cash and an equal sum annually for five years—that was the figure.

By saving and scheming Edgar had reached the point where he could raise about half of the sum required, but the other half looked a long way off, and it was a certainty that his uncle would sell out to somebody else unless the deal could be closed very soon.

A man named Bardwell, who owned two banks, was anxious to come in. He would have bought the paper for cash if the elder Hewitt would have sold it to him, but Bardwell was in politics for revenue only and desired the paper only as an adjunct to his schemes.

Upon a certain afternoon Bardwell saw reason to transfer $100,000 in cash from one of his banks to the other. He put the money into a hand bag and started across with it himself. About midway between the banks some clever person knocked Bardwell's spectacles from his nose, which was equivalent to blinding him—snatched the bag from his hand and made a clean escape.

An hour or two later a man named Henry Sanderson was arrested on the street because he seemed to fit the description of the thief and was known to have done such things before.

Among those who investigated the case was Edgar Hewitt, and he formed a very gloomy opinion as to the bank's chance of seeing his money again, and more especially of Hewitt's chance of finding the loot and securing the reward. Sanderson had arrived in the city on the previous evening and had taken a room at the hotel. This was his only known center of operations, and he had not visited it after Bardwell's mishap. He could not be traced to any possible place where he might have deposited his plunder.

Supposing that Sanderson was guilty it seemed probable that he had passed the money to a confederate who had escaped from the city. At this point in the case a ray of light illuminated the darkness. I have said that the staff of the paper included one other living and waiting member besides Hewitt. This was a bright girl named Mabel Reed, who gathered the news which was of special interest to women and made herself useful in various capacities. Her accomplishments included the expert use of the camera, and she supplied the paper with material for most of its illustrations.

Miss Reed's nature combined the romantic and the practical in admirable proportions. In her secret heart she was utterly devoted to Hewitt. His career was the subject of her dreams.

Among those who saw Mr. Sanderson in the early hours of his stay at notice headquarters was Mabel Reed and she "snapped" him with a camera that looked like a pump. She developed the picture, which came out very well, and sent the next day she took it into a section of the city which seemed to her to have been neglected.

Judging from Hewitt's story in the morning paper, Mabel Reed had been on his way to headquarters, Miss Reed intercepted him. She was considerably excited.

"I have found a little girl on Vine street," said she, "who saw that man go into the house, No. 21."

"Sanderson?"

"Yes. It was about an hour after the robbery. The girl says he used a key, but the landlady does not know him. It's a house where they rent furnished rooms, quite nice and respectable and all that. The landlady is telling the truth, but I'm sure that the little girl is not mistaken."

"What do you make of that?" asked Hewitt.

"Why, the man must have used somebody else's key. He has a—what do you call it—a pal living there."

"You may be right," said Hewitt, more excited than she had ever seen him before. "We'll look this up. Wait for me in that drug store while I run into headquarters and ask Staley what he knows. Then I'll join you."

Staley was the chief of police, a creature of politics, but not an aggressive bad man. He was tricky, but not malicious; clever up to a certain level and utterly dense beyond it.

"Hail," said he, drawing the word out into a sort of singing note when his eyes rested on Hewitt. "Here's the shrewdest boy of the bunch. You come right along with me," and he led the reporter into the innermost private room.

"Are you good at puzzles?" said he. "Fair," said Hewitt. "What have you got?"

"A note from Sanderson to his pal," responded Staley, and Hewitt's heart sank.

"You see," continued the chief, "it's the money we want. We've got the man beyond a doubt—that is, we've got one of them. There's another on the outside, as I knew from the beginning, and of course, the fellow on the inside would like to communicate with him."

"Well, why not give him a chance?" says I. So I fixed up a scheme by which Sanderson was able to write a note in his cell last evening and pass it to a little, unimportant crook whom we were holding here on suspicion and were ready to let go. The note was passed all right, and one of my men shadowed the little crook, and what do you suppose he did? By jingo, he went home and went to bed!"

"When I found that this was straight I had the fellow brought down here with Sanderson's note on him, I said, 'Where did he tell you to take this?'"

"And the crook replied, 'Nowhere; just take it and run along.' What do you make of that?"

"I don't know," said Hewitt. "What was in the note?"

"That's what I want you to tell me," responded the chief. "Here it is."

He laid before Hewitt the following humorous message written on half a sheet of note paper:

R A C E T E D H A S Y N H
I F H A L E T I I E O R I
I L L A I T M A I L I I L
I L L A I T M A I L I I L

"This is too much for me," said Hewitt, "but I know somebody who can read it."

"Who?"

"Miss Reed of our paper," said Hewitt, with enthusiasm. "She's the brightest girl in this town."

"She'll be here in two minutes," said Hewitt, and he made his word good.

After devoting five or ten minutes to a close study of the mystic scroll Miss Reed ventured to express this opinion: "The man knew that this would fall into your hands."

"What makes you think so?" asked Staley.

"I judge from what it says," she replied.

"Yes; it is quite simple. The figures refer to the letters. He might as well have set down the alphabet. Now, take the first number, 111. It can't really be 111, because there are not so many letters as that. But suppose you read it one, eleven—that is, first row, eleventh letter. That's S. Similarly 16 is first row, fifth letter. That's T, and 12 is A. Twenty-six is second row, sixth letter. That's L."

"Seems to be my name," said Staley, poring over the document. "STALEY and 112 is Y. That's M. Twenty-one is L, and 111 is S—STALEY IS. Twenty-five is A, and 110 is N, and 12 is A."

"And 111 twice means SS," said Hewitt. "Staley is an ass." Well, upon my word!

The chief's face was purple, but he forced a laugh.

"Funny, eh?" said he. "Mr. Sanderson thought he'd be funny. Well, well. Let's see what happens to him. But—er—I wouldn't mention this outside. You're a good fellow, Hewitt. You understand that—a man in my position, you know—And Miss Reed will keep mum. That's understood, eh, between friends?"

And Staley took a hand at each with a great affectation of cordiality. Hewitt promised to respect the chief's feelings on this delicate subject, and Miss Reed also gave her assurances, but in a very weak voice, which Hewitt attributed to the young lady's efforts not to laugh. But when they were upon the street and around the corner from headquarters she suddenly took his arm and leaned upon it heavily.

"I'm trembling so that I can hardly stand," she said. "Oh, I wonder if I've done anything very dreadful!"

"Why, what have you done?" he exclaimed, staring at her, amazed. "You're pale as a marble angel. What is it, Mabel?"

"It must be understood," said she, "that if anything comes of this—if we find that money—the reward is yours."

"The money?" Hewitt gasped. "Do you know where it is?"

"Perhaps, I can't be sure. I should not have told you yet. Edgar, I knew you were working for this reward; I know what you would do with the money and how much good would come of it, to yourself and others—the whole city. You must take this money if we win it."

"My dear girl," said he, with the tenderness that she had longed to hear in his voice, "it would be yours. I couldn't touch a penny of it. I've done nothing myself."

"Edgar," she said, "if you don't promise me to take it I'll carry this bit of paper right back to Mr. Staley and tell him what it means."

He fairly gasped at the sight of Mabel's earnestness in her hand.

"Good heavens," he exclaimed, "did you get away with that? I thought Staley threw it into the wastebasket."

"He did," she answered, "but here it is. Will you promise?"

He was silent for some seconds.

"Mabel," said he at last, "this reward from Bardwell would be the only half of what I need. By next week we could own the paper, you and I."

"We?"

"Partners," said he. "Shall we pool all we have and all we hope for, material and spiritual, just everything? Shall we?"

He extended his hand toward her, and it trembled. She looked into his face.

"Done!" said she, and they struck hands. "And now to seek our fortune."

"Where?"

"At 21 Vine street."

"But I don't understand," said she. "Suppose that Mr. Sanderson had a pal who lived at 21 Vine street," said she. "Suppose they were planning some robbery together and Mr. Sanderson had a key of that house so that he could call upon his pal by night or day without ringing the bell. Sanderson gets a chance to snatch a bag full of money; he gets it and runs to shelter. Where? In the Vine street house, of course. But his pal is not there. What shall he do? He knows that the alarm is out for him. He dare not go upon the street with the money in his pocket; he dare not delay longer lest every avenue out of the city shall be guarded. What would he do?"

"Hide it!" cried Hewitt.

"Precisely," said she. "Then he goes out and is immediately arrested. He is anxious about the money. He seizes upon the chance to communicate with his pal, although he knows that it is a trick. He never expected that note to be delivered; he expected the reporters to get hold of it and publish it for the sake of the joke on Staley. Then the pal would see it and read the real message."

"The real one?"

"No; another word," said she, "until we get to the house."

The landlady at No. 21 proved very obliging. After a whispered word or two with Mabel she led them to a room.

"The man's gone," she said. "He left this morning. And I'm sure he behaved like a gentleman while he was in my house. Who'd have thought he was a thief? My! It makes me faint to think of it. But he must be the one, for he's the only transient I had, and that's the old red leather chair in my house."

graph it," said the landlady. "Make yourself at home. You're quite welcome, I'm sure," and she smilingly withdrew.

"Take your knife," said Mabel in a whisper, "and pull out the ticks that hold that leather to the wood."

He stared at her and then obeyed from the stuffed seat of the chair. He presently drew $10,000 in bills.

"The paper is ours," he cried. "But now?"

She held Sanderson's message before his eyes.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS THROWN AWAY.

We hear much congressional conversation concerning conservation, but that magic word doesn't just apply to forests, coal and water power.

So many Americans continually sit at the apogee to save for that rainy day, while in small things all the profit pops out the bung-hole. That photograph shows the point.

"Goodness gracious," cries a careful housewife, "what a lot of beautiful white feathers wasted! Yes, dear lady; all are not so careful as you."

WOMEN GARDENERS LEARN AT SCHOOL

Scientific instruction given to female students at School of Horticulture, Near Jarrowtown-Ladies Taught to Raise Flowers, Vegetables and Fruits—Only Institution of its Kind in the Country.

Last Saturday a score or more of the members of the New Century Club of Philadelphia, visited the Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for Women near Jarrowtown. The women left the Reading Terminal on the 2:32 train under the guidance of the Club Committee on Forestry and Outdoor Art, of which Miss Emma Blakston is chairman, and on reaching Ambler were driven two miles to the school grounds in a bus "conveyance."

The club representatives first visited the main buildings of the school, which consist of a pleasant old stone farmhouse, situated on Lincolnton Pike, and its surrounding buildings, including the new dormitory, which has just been completed. Twenty acres of well-cultivated farmland surround the buildings, and attractive flower gardens, where during the season they clothe the embryo farmers, with the assistance of a few men to do the heavier work, have planted and nurtured splendid crops. Part of these were for the use of the school and the rest went to the city markets, where they received high praise for their excellence.

This school is the only one of its kind in the United States. It began operations only last February, but already its growing waiting list demands larger accommodations. Two teachers, graduates in horticulture, composed the teaching staff in the beginning, and this summer three more were added. Miss Mary O. Collins is principal, and she has a wide experience in the schools of horticulture in other countries. England, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Denmark and Russia all have schools of horticulture for women, which have long since passed the experimental stage, and now have a recognized position in the educational world. Many of their graduates are filling responsible positions in private and public gardens, in managing their own country places or as consulting horticulturists and lecturers.

With this precedent established by the other nations, and knowing that interest in horticulture in this country was increasing, a body of people consisting largely of Philadelphia club women, associated themselves together in 1907 under the title of "Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for Women" with the object of founding and maintaining a similar institution in America where women should be taught by lectures and by practical work the art and handicraft of gardening.

Thus far, of course, no pupil has covered her first year's work, and the course is in two years, with two months' holiday taken between the planting and harvesting seasons, according to the work the day. While horticulture proper, that is, the growing of vegetables, flowers and fruits, is the special subject of instruction, other subjects which naturally attend this line are provided for. Scientific work in botany, chemistry, geology and entomology, in so far as they are directly applicable are included in the theoretical course. Then, too, the curriculum includes garden carpentry, preserving of fruits and vegetables, bee keeping, poultry raising, elements of surveying and garden design, demonstration and opportunity for practical work in the care of ordinary live stock, marketing of produce and agricultural bookkeeping and business correspondence.

During the summer the women sold the produce from nearly five acres of asparagus, about two acres of strawberry, and smaller amounts of many fresh vegetables. Some two hundred grape vines are now in splendid bearing condition, while apples, pears, peaches and nut trees are soon to be robbed for the markets. Plans for winter work are already being made and the greenhouses and cold frames for forcing purposes will soon provide the choicest delicacies, which bring the highest prices in city markets. The visitors were provided liberally with fruit and nuts now in season and were shown the storehouse where canned goods from the earlier crops were stored.

The individual plots of ground allotted each pupil particularly interested in the clubwomen, for in these the individual taste of each pupil was shown. No rules govern these little plots, but the student may experiment along her special line for her own enjoyment outside of school hours. Some plots were devoted entirely to flowers; others were laid out in formal garden design by those who are going in for landscape gardening, while those who are intending to be plain farmers and direct their own country places devote their small ground space entirely to crops of a harder variety. Students must be at least high school graduates and must be 18 years of age or older. They are not definitely entered on the roster until they have passed a preliminary period of two months at school work.

Miss Jane B. Haines is president of the Board of Directors; Miss Elizabeth L. Lee, vice president; Miss Ellen P. Williams, secretary, and Miss Mary G. Thomas, treasurer. Other women prominent in work for the school are Miss Mary Deane of St. Stephens, Pennsylvania; Mrs. J. Willis Martin, Miss Gertrude Ely, Miss Emma Blakston and Mrs. Stuart Patterson.

Mrs. Margaret Lovett, aged 35 years, of Naomi avenue and Berne street, Blue Bell Hill, a large settlement, was of Lincoln Drive, Germantown, awaiting to be buried last Saturday morning. It is alleged, bichloride of mercury tablets and died in the afternoon at the Germantown Hospital. The Coroner was notified.

HOME FOR WIVES AND LITTLE CHILDREN OF CONVICTS

Established at Gwynedd Valley, and Now Open—Recreation and Rest Its Object.

What becomes of the children of jail birds? Every day a man is sentenced to prison, who leaves behind him small boys or girls or both, who must be fed and clothed and housed. The Judge who pronounces sentence on the erring father does not concern himself about the wife and children left to shift for themselves. It is not the business of the Judge to concern himself about these wails. His business is to see that the man who steals or forges or breaks the law in any way is sent to prison for his crime. It is in fact up to one's business in particular what the wife and children of the convict do to support themselves when the mother and father are in prison.

This condition of things has long puzzled Mrs. Ballington Booth, who has made work among jail birds almost a life mission. The convicts to whom she has taken in the prisons have begged her to do something for their children, to keep them from the streets, a knowledge of the fact that their father is a convict, and to take them away from where they were brought up among wholesome surroundings and healthy environment.

So many plights of destitution among the families of convicts have come under the notice of Mrs. Booth in the course of her evangelistic work in the prisons that she determined to establish a home somewhere for these innocent victims of others' wrongs. Recently the opportunity came, and now, in a beautiful place at Gwynedd Valley, the work has been established.

The ground and buildings are ideal for the purpose intended. Originally designed and built for a home for convalescent children the main structure is equipped for the reception of as many as 75 boys and girls, and in addition 50 mothers can be accommodated. The buildings and grounds, with the furniture, beds, bedding and crockery, all complete for the work intended. Mrs. Booth has given over as long as she will use them in the work she has in view.

There are some children at the home now, and these will be added to as deserving cases come under the notice of the prison evangelist, until the capacity of the home is reached. The 10 acres of ground adjoining the home are equipped with three cupfuls of four for the amusement of the children, and for the smaller of the two buildings is to be set apart for the use of women, who, it is expected, will come to the establishment later. It is intended to make of this smaller building a club house for the mothers, where they can gather in the afternoon and sew and converse and forget their troubles for the time being.

TIMELY RECIPES

NEW ENGLAND MUFFINS.

The following recipe for muffins comes from New England: Sift two cupfuls of cream of tartar and one of sugar with three cupfuls of flour and rub in a piece of butter the size of an egg. Beat three eggs well, and mix them with half a cupful of sugar, then add a cupful of milk. Stir this mixture through the flour and butter, and bake thirty minutes in a quick oven.

A farewell reception was tendered Miss Emma Davies by the congregation of the Jarrowtown Presbyterian church on Thursday evening. She left Monday for Korea, and will stay in Japan, where she will marry Rev. Clarence S. Hoffman, a former assistant pastor of the Jarrowtown church.

While Mrs. Servatus Billiger, of Telford, was attempting to some household duties she fell down the cellar steps and broke a leg.

ENCOURAGED BY THE OUT-LOOK for the success of the fusion ticket in Montgomery county, the Democrats and Keystone party of Junka, have united upon a ticket
which they will strongly support on election day.

They expect to give the Grundy machine the fight of its life and to land
their candidates in office. The Keystone vote in the county is estimated above 2000.

THAT THE CANDIDATES on the fusion ticket in Montgomery are hopeful of success is indicated by the way they are all hustling. They all report a strong independent feeling in the county, which bodes ill for the Johnson machine.

WEATHER PERMITTING, THIS Saturday will be a gala day in Hathoro, when the local firemen and their friends come to town.

Hathoro extends a cordial welcome to the volunteer fire fighters and invites everybody to come and enjoy the fun.

Its latch string is out to all.

HARTSVILLE

Rudolph Hess is on the sick list.
A cement walk has been laid in front of Miss Margaret Selser's property.

Mrs. Frank Ealer has closed her house and will spend the winter with relatives.

Some of our residents expect to attend the business parade at Hathoro
on Saturday.

G. W. Rubinkam, Esq., is attending the State Sunday School convention at New Castle, Pa., this week.

Harry Messer, who has been a great sufferer for some time, was taken to one of the Philadelphia hospitals.

The Woman's Home and Missionary Society of the Neshaminy of Warwick church met in the church hall on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Carr and baby, Sara M., spent Sunday with Mr.
and Mrs. William Lukens and family, of Hickory.

Mrs. Nellie Worthington, of Greensburg, arrived here on Sunday evening on an extended visit with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Joseph M. Carr and little daughter, Sara M., spent a few days this week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Jones, of Newtown.

Rally day will be observed in the Neshaminy of Warwick church next Sabbath morning. An interesting program has been prepared.

Mrs. Charley Weaver has had her property improved by having the house and fence nicely painted.
Charles DeCoursey and force did the work.

The musical instructor of the life and drum corps boys has started dancing class to be held weekly.
The first dance was given on Wednesday evening in the new band room.

Some of our residents attended the installation and banquet given on Saturday evening, October 7, by the Warrington I. O. O. F. Lodge at Jamison.
The literary and music of these social functions are always much enjoyed by those attendance.

POLITICS TO STATE

NORRISTOWN LETTER.

Light on Politics as Seen at the County Seat.

Norristown, Pa., Oct. 13.

A significant feature of the late primaries, as revealed in the analysis of the official count, is the desperation with which Republican attempted to carry off the Keystone Judge nomination. The evidence is tell-tale, not only in the fact that numbers of keystone ballots were marked for William F. Solly, but in the fact that the Republican vote fell considerably below normal in certain districts and the Keystone (with Solly for Judge) being up correspondingly.
This the very charge which the machinists flung at the Democrats—the stealing of the Judge nomination.
The Keystone—was named against said machinists' own door, for morally at least, the attempt to do as bad as the actual accomplishment. Besides, the accusation is not proved in the case of the Democracy. There were some, doubtless, who did vote for the Keystone ticket, but the evidence of "wholesale" is surely lacking.

Frantic attempts are being put forth to "cover up" all signs of "the late unpleasantness" in Republican circles
—the contests of the District Attorney and the Recorder of Deeds candidates. However, they are hopeless. And further, it is not exaggerated to use the phrase "the late unpleasantness," since the same implies that the thing is over and done with.
As a matter of fact, the "unpleasantness" is still in existence—very much so. Also, it is growing in intensity.

That brazen manoeuvre of sending out cards with the "choice of aspirants" for primary nominations, known as the names of J. Ambler Williams (for District Attorney) and of Merit W. Minsinger and Samuel S.
Hartman (for Recorder of Deeds), did not appear, has galloped the adherents of the non-favored, and a kick-up of the whole has not been witnessed here in many a day, is the result.

"Shelve" (for District Attorney) is a Jonah, and why in the name of common sense the ring should force him to the fore I can not understand.
He had a right to try for the nomination,
of course, but the use of machine factorial in his behalf, or in the case of the others, is more than we propose to allow. We do not countenance favoritism in any case. Let each candidate hustle for himself. They did a bold,
bad piece of work when they sent out
those cards, and they'll hear from us
at the polls.

Trouble in a minor key for the gang is that at the present time it is a drawal of so many aspirants prior to the date for filing nomination petitions. As we have seen, the "choice of aspirants" acted with great dispatch in a number of these instances, heads falling every day. Most of the hustle for himself. They did a bold,
bad piece of work when they sent out
those cards, and they'll hear from us
at the polls.

Inasmuch as the Republican nominee for District Attorney, Conrad S.
Shelve, is regarded as especially weak,
the Democrats and Keystone party of Junka, have united upon a ticket
which they will strongly support on
election day.

They expect to give the Grundy machine the fight of its life and to land
their candidates in office. The Key-
above 2000.

voted at the primaries for Williams;
who has up until the present I fought for the vain hope of reform within the party, and who unquestionably voices the heartfelt belief of thousands of thinking, straight forward adherents of Republicanism, bears out this assumption.

"I am sick, sore and tired of the studied forcing, by a handful of men who call themselves the organization, of Conrad S. Shelve to the fore in the publican politics. I myself protested against the practice this time, when it was evident there would be trouble over the District Attorney nomination; and when I asked for a reason as to why Shelve should again aspire, after the disastrous experience of four years ago, I was brazenly informed that Conrad S. Shelve is a good fellow and the organization ought to take care of him.
That galloped me, and I let the fact be known then and there. Further I stated that there is no rhyme or reason in such a show-down. I pointed out that the organization had taken care of Shelve—that he has been District Attorney (six years), Assistant District Attorney (six years), and now
to the County Commissioners (three years). It strikes me that's taking care some. At any rate, it was not policy to run him on the list of general election candidates by open machine favoritism, and when everybody remembers the terrible knife-wielding against Bean (attributed to the machine sympathizers of Shelve) because of the latter's defeat for the nomination four years ago; when it was plain to see that Shelve was in the District Attorney (six years), Assistant District Attorney (six years), and now
to the County Commissioners (three years). It strikes me that's

John Utzy, of Glenside, was a visitor here on Monday.

Miss Marcia Stevens has recovered
from the diphtheria.

Henry Wilbur spoke at Abington meeting on the 8th inst.

The Republican primary election was held in our town on Tuesday evening.

Miss Clara Trumbauer, who has been quite sick, is recuperating at Atlantic City.

Howard Robinson, of Weldon, and David Conrad, of Richmond, Virginia, were visitors here on Tuesday.

Frank Lachman and Miss Emma D.
Clymer, both of Jenkintown, were married on Wednesday, October 4, 1911.

The Sunday school convention held at Salem Baptist church on Saturday and Sunday was largely attended.

William G. Diehl, of Jenkintown station, has purchased of Mrs. H. Bur-ford's light lunch restaurant at Ogontz.

The youngest son of Barclay H.
Warburton is recovering from an operation for appendicitis at the German House. The color scheme in the dining room is light blue and white.

On October 19, in the Nursery building, there will be a rummage sale for the benefit of the Jenkintown Day Nursery.

Mrs. Fannie T. Thomson and daughter, Caroline, are spending the winter in apartments at Seventeenth and Oxford streets, Philadelphia.

Pastor Barnes, of the M. E. church, performed the marriage ceremony at Oxford M. E. church on Tuesday for two of his former parishioners.

On October 6th, Margaret A. daughter of William V. and Margaret E. McGee, died, aged eight years, one month. The funeral services were held on Tuesday from her parents' residence, 447 Leedom street, also High Mass at the Immaculate Conception church. Interment at Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

On Friday evening George Jones
and Will Winn were brought before Squire Kirk at the Town hall, on charge of affray and disorderly conduct, on the sworn information of Chief Jensen, of the Jenkintown police. The defendants were engaged in fight on Maple street on Friday forenoon. Jones had a brick in one hand and a stone in the other. They were fighting over twenty cents bet on a game of pool. They were each held under $300 bail for December term of court.

C. D. Musser, of the firm of Kirk and Musser, was taken ill on Tuesday of last week. He was under the professional treatment of Dr. S. Walton. On Monday of this week the doctor pronounced it typhoid fever. At some time, Will returns home at the ser, Esq., of Bellefonte, Pa. He was deserve great credit for their faithful service in this case. His many friends wish and hope for his speedy recovery.

AMBLER

Harry Reed, Jr., is building a frame stable.

Mrs. A. L. Bartholomew moved to Asbury Park, N. J., on Monday.

Jacob Yost will move to October 18 from Springhouse to Ambler.

Our firemen and their friends are making preparations to go to Hattboro
this Saturday.

William A. Davis, cashier, has returned to his duties in the Ambler baker after a week's illness.

Harvey Dager will have a big combination sale next Wednesday. See ad. in another part of this paper.

The deacons and pastor of the Baptist church are discussing plans leading to the inauguration of a religious work among the Italians and Hungarians in Ambler.

The county commissioners are expanding about $1500 on the improvement to the surface of the Chestnut Hill and Springhouse turnpikes between Rose Valley and Tenna avenue.

Joseph M. Stackhouse, carpenter and builder, has just completed alterations and additions to the residence of Fred. Nichols. A pantry and dining room have been added and a cement walk put down.

J. J. Dager held public sale of cows at Ambler on Monday. Fair prices were realized, the highest being $24.
A pair of calves were sold for $17.50.
Mr. Dager will have another cow sale in about three weeks and in the meantime has a lot of shouts at private sale.

On account of wet grounds the third game of the series, between K. and M.
A. A. and Susquehanna, of Lansdale, for the $200 purse and which was to have been played at Lansdale last Saturday was postponed to the Saturday evening, the game will be played at Lansdale this Saturday.

The Democratic party of Ambler held its joint primaries on Saturday evening and endorsed the Republican nominees with the exception of tax collector and school director. For the two-year term, John Fisher and Jesse F. Davis being nominated respectively for those offices.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

KREWSON-FINNEY.

The wedding of Anna M. Finney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Newton Finney, and Mr. K. Krewson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krewson, took place on Wednesday afternoon, October 11th, at the home of the bride, near Hattboro.

Mrs. Walter Finney played the wedding march. Rev. H. R. Parbeck performed the wedding ceremony.

The bride was gown in white satin and carried a train of white carriages, while the maid of honor, Miss Ellen Finney, was gown in white. The color scheme in the dining room was pink.

After the ceremony a bountiful dinner was served after which the bride and groom left for a trip to Washington, D. C. When they return they will reside in the house lately built by Mr.
Krewson in Hattboro.

The house was beautifully decorated.
The arched, under which Mr. and Mrs. Krewson were seated, was of fern, white dahlias and pink carnations, other flowers and plants were also in evidence. The color scheme in the dining room was pink.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were received, and there were about one hundred guests present.

Rheumatism

Is A Constitutional Disease.
It manifests itself in local aches and pains—inflamed joints and stiff muscles—but it cannot be cured by local applications.

It requires constitutional treatment, and the best is a course of the great blood purifying and tonic medicine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

which corrects the acid condition of the blood and builds up the system. Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs.

What other educative force that any man can bring into his home can compare with the daily newspaper? In making choice of newspapers the local newspaper should always be preferred for local news. In the wider general field The Philadelphia Record is a general favorite; because it is clean; because it is accurate; because it is impartial; because it is in no sense yellow. These are the peculiarities and superlatives which have made it the most widely circulated of Pennsylvania daily morning newspapers.

As we grow older we are able to generate more sympathy for others who have failed to make good.

WYNDMOOR

William Smith has gone on a business trip to Florida.
Miss Helen Hamilton, of Orville, visited friends here on Tuesday.

A supper will be held this Saturday evening in the annex of St. Mark's reformed church.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Eggleston, Sr. are at Atlantic City, where they expect to spend the winter.

Charles Hane has sold the house in which he resided and will move into his smaller house on Willow Grove avenue.

George Urnsh has gone to the mountainous districts of Clearfield county, Pa., where he will spend the winter with friends.

Misses Nina and Wenonah Waterfield, Daniel Shaw and several friends from Germantown, attended the social gathering at the Lutheran church on Tuesday evening.

The Wyndmoor Fire and Hose Company will be unable to participate in the firemen's parade at Hatboro this Saturday owing to disappointment in getting their engine, which is being repaired.

On Tuesday evening a social gathering of the members of Grace Lutheran church was held at which members of all but two of the catechetical classes, since the organization of the church ten years ago, were present. A very appropriate and feeling address was made by Rev. G. C. Reese, who was instrumental in organizing the church. Letters were read from Rev. L. A. Weisenberger, congratulating the members on the property and advancement of the church.

BEST SUNDAY SCHOOL METHODS DISCUSSED

Teachers and Preachers in Session at Ivyland—Represent Work Among Nearly 2000 Young Folks—Sixth Sabbath School District of Bucks.

The eighteenth annual convention of the Sixth Sabbath School District of Bucks county was held at the Ivyland Presbyterian church, last Saturday.

Rev. B. M. Gemmill, pastor of the Ivyland and Hartsville churches, presided and made an address of welcome.

Miss Bessie Cogan served as secretary for the district and each of the churches open all the year; six teacher training departments; seven separate singing room; number of scholars, 2032; cradle roll members, 241; home department members, 241; forty-two scholars united with the church during the year from the twenty-one churches.

Miss Cogan also gave a talk on elementary methods.

The subject was further discussed by Mr. Gemmill and Rev. William Furbeck, who presided over the convention on "Elements in the Conception of the Sunday School Teacher." What is a Good Teacher?

Rev. John Lentz spoke upon the subject "The Sunday School and the Nation."

Mrs. Fetter, of Ivyland, rendered two soprano solos during the morning.

The following members were appointed: Nomination, Rev. John Lentz, Mrs. Rubinkam, William Barton; place of meeting, Mrs. Alma Ship; resolutions, Rev. William Furbeck, G. W. Rubinkam and Miss Bertha Morgan.

Rev. A. E. Stuart, of Hartsville, presided over the afternoon session.

Rev. Herbert Heisel, of the Market Square Presbyterian church, Germaniam, who made an eloquent appeal for the "Immigrant."

M. S. Cogan then gave his report on the work of the district.

Rev. S. V. Herick, of the Doylestown Reformed church, gave an earnest address on the subject "The Sunday School in Character Building Today."

Officers for the coming year were chosen as follows: President, Rev. A. E. Stuart, vice president, J. Purdy Weiss; secretary, Mrs. John Lentz; treasurer, J. J. Vanarsdale; home department, Mrs. Wesley Masterson; normal department, Mrs. M. Cogan; primary department, Mrs. Alfred Matt.

An invitation was extended to meet next year in the Baptist church at Doylestown.

Rev. O. J. Randall, of Richboro, spoke on "The Conservation of the Child."

The song services of the day were conducted by William Barton. Miss Julia Jamison presided at the organ.

In the evening at the town hall, music was furnished by a chorus of forty voices, from Ivyland, Johnsville and Hartsville, and by a quartette from Richboro. Rev. William Barnes, of Wyncote, spoke eloquently on "The Training of a Teacher."

During the seasons there were vocal solos by Mr. DeVou.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

TIMELY TOPICS OF PLANTS AND PESTS DISCUSSED WEEKLY
By H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pa.

FALL PRUNING OF YOUNG PEACH TREES.

The following reply to a correspondent asking whether peach trees should be pruned in the fall when planting them was made by Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist of the State Department of Agriculture, and this may be instructive to others about to plant trees this fall. The reply was as follows:

"Replying to your letter of the 21st I would say that you can plant peach trees as soon as the leaves drop naturally. I would not touch those that have been stripped of their leaves by artificial means. Cut them back when you plant them, but not quite as far as you cut them in the spring, when your further cutting can be done.

I trust this gives you the exact information wanted and shall be glad to give you further advice if needed."

WEEVILS.

Prof. H. A. Surface, of the Department of Agriculture, was asked sometime ago how to destroy weevils in stored grain. The Professor replied that these pests can easily be destroyed by the use of carbon bisulphide, observing the directions contained in the following letter:

"Replying to your letter asking how to get rid of weevil, which went from your wheat to your oats in the barn, I can say that the best thing you can do is to give the grain the carbon bisulphide treatment. Put it into a bag that can be well closed on all sides (although if the top can not be closed this is not essential, as it can be covered with wet blankets, and this will take the place of a top covering).

Four over the grain one in a hundred bushels of the grain contained. Keep fire away from this, as the fumes are inflammable. Do not breathe it any more than is necessary. After pouring the liquid, cover well with wet blankets to hold down the fumes. Let it remain and fumigate for a day before attempting to ventilate it. I will do no harm just to let it remain permanently closed, after removing the wet blankets within a day from the time they were placed on the grain. This will not injure the grain for feeding, grinding or seedling, and it will kill the weevil.

It would be a good plan to examine empty bins, barrels, boxes and the floors and sides of mows, and see if any weevils are to be found there. If so, spray them with five per cent. solution of creolin or crude carbolic acid in water. This is the same treatment as is given the pests in poultry houses."

MAGNOLIA SCALE.

The importance of knowing the life history of insects when planning to destroy them is shown in the case of the Magnolia Scale, a specimen of which insect infesting the Magnolia tree was sent to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, Pa., containing free moving young scale. Since these insects are most easily destroyed in this stage, Prof. Surface advised immediate spraying with some contact insecticide as follows:

"The specimens you sent to us on your cucumber tree are called the Magnolia scale. It infests the Magnolia or Cucumber and the Tulip trees. I have seen it only on these two varieties. It is our largest scale insect. The young are crawling on the branch at the present time, showing when they appear. This is consequently an excellent time to spray with a comparatively mild insecticide which will kill them.

The most important time, by all means, for the destruction of scale insects of any kind is while the young are crawling. This shows that from the middle to the latter part of September is the proper time for destroying this largest of the scale insects, which is a Hemispherical or Turtle-shell scale often found on Magnolia or Cucumber and Tulip trees.

I recommend spraying with one pound of white oil soap in six gallons of water, or one pound of ordinary soft soap or ordinary brown soap in about three gallons of water, or seven or eight per cent. kerosene emulsion, or a very strong tobacco decoction. This is a remedy that will kill young scale insects of all kinds and also plant lice.

This particular pest will not spread to fruit trees. It is often held in check by parasites. Where these are present they are indicated by a number of small holes in the shells of the larger or mature individuals. It is best, however, to use a spray to exterminate them or control them rather than to wait for the development of their parasites."

VARIETIES OF APPLES.

The State Zoologist, Prof. H. A. Surface, was asked by a correspondent to name a list of best varieties of apples for a person planting 100 trees. The following letter by the Professor may be a help to others who are contemplating planting an orchard of this size:

"For one hundred apple trees for commercial purposes I would plant twenty-five Stayman Winesap, twenty-five York Imperial, fifteen Rome Beauty, fifteen Mammoth Black Twig or Paragon, ten Summer Rambo and ten Smokehouse. If there is room for a few more I would add from ten to twenty Jonathan. If you wish to cut down the list to reduce it, for your region, I would recommend Stayman Winesap, York Imperial, and for a third variety make your own personal choice between Rome Beauty, Jonathan, Paragon and Smokehouse. The list which I have named has the special value of ripening at different dates.

You can commence with your Summer Rambo, and these will be followed by Smokehouse, which in turn will be followed by Grimes Golden, Jonathan, Rome Beauty, Paragon and Stayman Winesap in order, until you come to York Imperial, which can be picked last. While the York is not regarded as of high quality, it is one of the very best commercial apples for that region. It is a strong grower, and is a good bearer, and the fruit has good color and size, and sells well.

I would advise you to go slow on summer apples, but if you wish to plant some apples to ripen before the Summer Rambo, I would recommend Yellow Transparent, Red Astrachan, Cornell's Fancy and Maiden Blush. If you select one for local market, where you expect to sell them yourself, you can afford to prolong the ripening season by planting a number of varieties that will give a succession of dates of ripening. If you wish to be a shipper, and the more you condense your picking period, so as to ship quite a quantity at once, the better it may prove to be for you.

I would not plant the trees this fall if ground that is seeded in wheat, unless I could get the tree row cultivated, beginning next spring, and cultivating the tree row itself with a one horse cultivator, letting the wheat grow between the rows. Above all else, you should avoid planting in wheat field or grain field or seed field, and letting the young trees remain uncultivated. If you wish to get the seed in, you should get the planting so ahead, and grow your wheat and take it off next summer, and you will have a clover field or grain field, and your clover seed in the spring and it starts right, and then you can plow this field in clover seed, and it will be a better place to let the trees be let to your clover and remain over the spring. There is no great advantage in fall planting, where you are planting only a few trees and will have plenty of time to get them properly planted fairly early in the spring. The only advantage of fall planting is that you have turned over your ground exposed to washing during the winter. If you can get some cover crop on it like rye, that will hold the moisture and grow further fertility, this can be done in the fall, and will be a good plan."

TREAT WHEAT FOR SMUT BEFORE PLANTING.

A Lancaster County farmer wrote to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, and asked him how to treat seed wheat to prevent the crop from smut. This is an important and timely topic, which is answered as follows:

"I have successfully immersed grain in liquid mixture by putting it into sacks, and putting the sacks into a barrel of liquid, letting it down with a rope and pulley fastened above. It is then taken out and left to drain for a few minutes, and poured on a clean floor, where the wind is allowed to blow over it, and it can be shoveled over occasionally. It must not be done in muck weather.

It can also be treated by spreading it on a barn floor, and pouring the liquid over it from a sprinkling can. Fungicide, as is the whole sack into it, will not do the work. The material to use for this would be hydrocyanic acid gas. The material for the sack is one pint of formalin in thirty gallons of water. This is enough to treat five or six sacks. The cost is only twenty-five or thirty cents. You can not afford to plant oats or wheat without treating the seed to destroy the smut germs."

BORER IN PEACH AND PLUM TREES.

One of the most destructive insects in Pennsylvania, and one of which most questions are received by Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist, Harrisburg, Pa., is the Peach-tree borer, which is destructive to both peach and plum trees. The directions of the State Zoologist for treating this pest to remove it, and also to prevent it from entering the trees again are as follows:

"The borer works beneath the bark and wood at the base of the peach tree. The presence of the pest is indicated by fine grains of sawdust like material in the gum at the base of the trunk. The gum may come from trees from one or more causes, and is not always an indication of the presence of borers, but then it does not have fine grains mixed with it.

"The borer is the larva of a wasp-like moth, which flies quickly in the day time, from the middle of June to the middle of September, and lays its eggs on the bark at the base of the trunk. Within a few days the little grub or worm hatches from the egg, and eats its way through the bark to the interior soft layer where it feeds and lives during the fall, winter and spring.

"After the borer is once beneath the bark of a peach tree, the best thing to do is to remove it with a sharp knife, or pointed wood, and cut out the tree much to cut the bark with lengthwise slits, but the cutting should not be crosswise. They should be removed at any time of the year that they can be found present, but especially in both fall and very early spring.

It is best to prevent the borers from entering the tree by coating the bark during the middle of June, and again in July and August, with a painting or coating of leaded lime-sulfur solution. Boil together one pound of quick lime, with two pounds of sulfur and from one to three gallons of water for one hour. Then dilute this to about four or five gallons, and paint, wash or spray it on the trunk of the tree at the base. Do this after the borers that are within the tree have been killed. It will prevent the moth from laying its eggs there for some time. After this is done mound the trees with a little mound of earth to a height of a few inches around the trunk. This treatment should be given to all plum and peach trees, as the Peach-tree borer works in the plum as well as the peach.

SOLEBURY FARMERS' CLUB.

The Solebury Farmers' Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Hurley on Saturday, October 7th. Mr. Hurley thinks it probable that the farmers' troubles concerning the temperature of milk received at the stations in Philadelphia, are over for next year as the leading road has promised to supply refrigerator cars through the warm weather. A slight advance in freight will result, however. Some think the temperature regulations will be made not quite so stringent. Mr. Hurley also advocated plenty of air in the cow stables through the winter. He cited an instance in which one man had lost many cattle from tuberculosis. After removing the glass from his stable windows he had no more trouble along that line.

Other subjects of general interest were discussed.

BUCKINGHAM FARMERS' CLUB.

The Buckingham Farmers' Club held its regular monthly meeting on Saturday, October 7th, with an exceptionally large attendance, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Wilson. Edwin Thompson said farmers should co-operate in buying supplies and selling products. He said at present the middle men get most of the profit.

John Loux said farmers should be compelled by law to destroy wild carrot. Topics on domestic economy were discussed.

MAN LICKED CONSTABLES, JURY ACQUITTED HIM.

S. D. Johnson, a Mount Airy milk dealer, with farm in Whitpain township, was acquitted in Norristown Criminal Court Friday of the charge of aggravated assault and battery, resisting an officer and larceny. But the jury indicted him with the costs.

On July 1 last, Robert Porter, constable, went with Charles Marple, another local constable, to make a levy on the property of Johnson in Whitpain township. A fight resulted and Johnson tested the constables. He was later arrested. His defence was that he was attacked by the two men and did not know that they were law officers.

As people get older they can have a good time without making a fuss about it.

Stickney Gasoline Engines
ARE THE BEST
No. 12
No Trouble at All
I have never had an expert or even an agent for the Stickney Engine on my place. I took the engine home and my boy started it and it runs very steady. I can highly recommend it for simplicity, power, durability, ease of starting and economy of gasoline.

POLICE NEWS.

Norman Berkheimer, chauffeur for Horace Fogel, president of the Philadelphia base ball club, was given a hearing before Justice Conly on Monday evening. At the hearing it was claimed that Berkheimer was driving down the York road in an automobile when the road was torn up and 16 Italian workmen were carrying a 60 foot trolley rail. The automobile struck the end of a bar, tossed several of the men in the excavation, among them Vianon Sutton, who had his hip injured, which detained him in the hospital for a week or more. The accident occurred at the curve in the York road at its junction with Forrest avenue. Samuel Hiss represented the Italian and a Philadelphia attorney, Mr. Fogel. The case was settled by the injured man accepting a money consideration.

George McGear was arrested by Officer Call. At the hearing before Justice Haines, he was charged with being nuisance and fined $7.50. Raymond Wylie and brother, Grant Wylie were taken into custody by Ganley by the Jenkintown police. The Wylie boys had been arrested in Philadelphia on suspicion of being implicated in a robbery in Jenkintown when the Dilworth house was broken into. Not sufficient evidence to hold them for the robbery could be found. It is thought that the boys were implicated in a robbery at Oak Lane, and are being detained in the hope of securing sufficient evidence to hold them. One of the boys has been identified by Dr. Hertz as being seen near the house of Rev. Dr. Gambell, of Melrose, which was robbed some time ago.

Several men arrested by the Cheltenham police tried at Norristown this week were convicted. Samuel Wreley, colored man, who solicited for a faith institution and who stole a watch and chain valued at $90 from the power house of Countess Santa Eulalia, was sentenced to three years of labor in the Eastern penitentiary.

Charles Sidney Shores, who stole the brass fittings from the pump house on the Fox property was convicted and will be sentenced this Saturday.

John Norwood was convicted of forcible entry and larceny, having stolen tools, etc., at Melrose, to be sentenced on Saturday.

John Miller, who had been headed guilty of stealing $50 worth of goods from Lafayette Worthington, of Glenside, was sentenced Saturday.

Benjamin Best, a boy at Glenside, pleaded guilty to the charge of larceny from Whittaker's drug store. Sentenced this Saturday.

GLENVIEW AND EDGE HILL.

GUITY OF CRUELTY TO DOG.

Emma Leighton and Wallace Leighton, of Abington, were convicted in Criminal Court at Norristown last Saturday of cruelty to a dog belonging to their neighbor, George W. Goodwin. There was testimony that Mrs. Leighton hit with a rake and jabbed with a pitchfork Goodwin's bound. It was alleged that the dog was carried into the Leighton cellar and a policeman summoned and told that the dog was vicious and that the Leightons were afraid of it, and the policeman shot and killed it. Sentence will be imposed this Saturday.
